Section A (Reading)

1. Read the following passage carefully.

1. Garbage cans are not magical portals. Trash does not disappear when you toss it in a can. Yet, the average American throws away an estimated 1,600 pounds of waste each year. If there are no magic garbage fairies, where does all that trash go? There are four methods to managing waste: recycling, landfilling, composting, and incinerating. Each method has its strengths and weaknesses. Let's take a quick look at each.

2. Recycling is the process of turning waste into new materials. For example, used paper can be turned into paperboard, which can be used to make book covers. Recycling can reduce pollution, save materials, and lower energy use. Yet, some argue that recycling wastes energy. They believe that collecting, processing, and converting waste uses more energy than it saves. Still, most people agree that recycling is better for the planet than landfilling.

3. Landfilling is the oldest method of managing waste. In its simplest form, landfilling is when people bury garbage in a hole. Over time the practice of landfilling has advanced. Garbage is compacted before it is thrown into the hole. In this way more garbage can fit in each landfill.

4. Large liners are placed in the bottom of landfills so that toxic garbage juice doesn't get into the ground water. Sadly, these liners don't always work. Landfills may pollute the local water supply. Not to mention that all of that garbage stinks. Nobody wants to live next to a landfill. This makes it hard to find new locations for landfills.

5. As landfill space increases, interest in composting grows. Composting is when people pile up organic matter, such as food waste, and allow it to decompose. The product of this decomposition is compost. Compost can be added to the soil to make the soil richer and better for growing crops. While composting is easy to do onsite somewhere, like home or school, it's hard to do after the garbage gets all mixed up. This is because plastic and other inorganic materials must be removed from the compost pile or they will pollute the soil. There's a lot of plastic in garbage, which makes it hard to compost on a large scale.

6. One thing that is easier to do is burning garbage. There are two main ways to incinerate waste. The first is to create or harvest a fuel from the waste, such as methane gas, and burn the fuel. The second is to burn the waste directly. The heat from the incineration process can boil water, which can power steam generators.
Unfortunately, burning garbage pollutes the air. Also, some critics worry that incinerators destroy valuable resources that could be recycled.

7. Usually, the community in which you live manages waste. Once you put your garbage in that can, what happens to it is beyond your control. But you can make choices while it is still in your possession. You can choose to recycle, you can choose to compost, or you can choose to let someone else deal with it. The choice is yours.

1.1 On the basis of your reading, choose the correct answer from the options given below. 10

2. Read the following passage carefully.

1. The history of literature really began long before man learned to write. Dancing was the earliest of the arts. Man danced for joy around his ancient camp fire after the defeat and slaughter of his enemy. He yelled and shouted as he danced and gradually the yells and shouts became consistent and caught the measure of the dance and thus the first war song was sung. As the idea of God developed, prayers were framed. The song and prayer became traditional and were repeated from one generation to another, each generation adding something of its own.

2. As the man slowly grew more civilized, he was compelled to invent some method of writing by three urgent necessities. Then were certain things that it was dangerous to forget and which, therefore, had to be recorded. It was often necessary to communicate with persons who were some distance away and it was necessary to protect one's property by making tools, cattle, and so on, in some distinctive manner. So, man taught himself to write, and having learned to write purely for utilitarian reasons he used this new method for preserving his war songs and his prayers. Of course, among these ancient people, there were only a very few individuals who learned to write, and only a few could read what was written.

3. As writing evolved and became more refined, the tradition of storytelling emerged. With the ability to record and communicate through written language, people began to weave tales of adventure, mythology, and morality. Storytellers became revered members of society, passing down tales that entertained, educated, and preserved cultural heritage. These stories were often performed orally, captivating audiences with vivid descriptions, emotions, and lessons. Over time, written literature expanded to include epics, novels, plays, and various genres that continue to captivate readers and listeners alike. Today, literature stands as a testament to the human imagination, serving as a means of expression, exploration, and connection across time and cultures.
